1 Subject Area

Music education as a science studies all forms of music teaching and learning including the frameworks, prerequisites, traditions and conditions that influence the situations where music constitutes the content of the various learning processes. Problems are thus dealt with in contexts where music is or has been an element in upbringing, education, teaching or any other influence in some cultural and societal situation. Music education as a field of research is interdisciplinary by nature and uses theories and methods from for example education, psychology, sociology, philosophy and musicology in order to understand and explain phenomena in music education.

2 Programme curriculum

Education at third-cycle level in Music Education that concludes with a Degree of Licentiate comprises a total of two years' full time study (120 credits) and consists of a study programme that gives 45-60 credits and a licentiate thesis that gives 60-75 credits.

Education at third-cycle level in Music Education that concludes with a Degree of Doctor comprises a total of four years' full time study (240 credits) and consists of a study programme that gives 90-120 credits and a doctoral thesis that gives 120-150 credits.

A mandatory part of the education at third circle level is to participate in research seminars at the institution and present own as well as give oral and written comments upon other's texts.

To guarantee that the doctoral student reaches expected learning outcomes a number of courses at the third circle level are defined as mandatory. See 4.1 below.

An individual study plan is drawn up for every third-cycle student (according to a fixed model) where the study programme is specified in detail. The individual study plan is followed up at least twice a year by the doctoral student and his/her supervisor and is approved by the Head of Department at least once a year, as delegated by the Vice-Chancellor.
